Grade 5 Highlights

We understand this past year has presented some unique challenges, some of which are related to the expectations about the transition into middle school. Despite these challenges, though, we have reflected, and realize that our students aren't the same children that we welcomed into our ZOOM classrooms last year. They are all a couple inches taller; and their style has changed a little as they've grown into themselves a tad bit more. More importantly, they have matured, and become more independent and resilient in the face of adversity.

Students are reading at a higher grade level and speak with more confidence than they did in September. We as Fifth grade teachers care; more than just the academic side of learning how to write a thesis statement, or knowing how Ancient Mesopotamia developed. We have prepared for what's ahead. Our expectations were designed to make them grow as students, and as children. We set out to create our classrooms as an environment where students could learn many things as well as socialize and make many friends; a place they genuinely enjoyed to be.

As the final year of elementary school for our grade 5 kids closes, take the opportunity to sit quietly, and reflect how much we've taught each other as we've grown together. Learning is bidirectional, shared, and multidimensional. That is the beauty of education. We hope our kids keep aiming for the stars, and continue to grow in both their academic as well as personal lives.
Wishing you all the best for 6th grade, kiddos!
