Principal Message: Helping your students be successful in distance learning relies on two critical elements:

1. Students need to have a clear schedule. Posting your child's school schedule as well as his/her bedtime and free time helps us keep them prepared and ready to learn. Sleeping schedules are extremely important.
2. Students need a quiet learning space. It is important for students to have a desk or table for learning that is free from distractions. This includes people off camera chatting with the student. During class time, students should not be lying in their beds, cuddling up in blankets, or lying on the couch. It is important that students are sitting in a chair that they can stand up from and take a break from during breaks.

We thank you for your partnership in doing the best for our kids.
